New York Law School

Courses Developed:

Introduction to Legal Research, Advanced Legal Research (Developed this course both as a team teacher at University of North Dakota and currently as a sole instructor at University of Idaho for Spring 2019). I developed both courses to be “flipped,” i.e., I created and update instructional videos to be viewed before class, rather than lecture extensively in class. Class time is devoted primarily to working through research exercises, as I believe research is learned more effectively by performing it in a controlled setting with an instructor providing guidance.

Non-credit Classes, Workshops, Seminars, Invited Lectures, etc.:

Research instruction provided as a one-time guest lecturer in: Comparative Law, Legal Research and Writing (before the course’s transition to Legal Writing and Analysis), Immigration Clinic, General Practice Clinic (University of Idaho); Lawyering Skills, Solo Practice (University of North Dakota); Legal Practice (New York Law School)

Research Workshop Series (New York Law School): A series of required one-time research workshops; 1Ls were required to complete a designated number of sessions of which they were allowed to choose which ones; optional for (but frequently attended by) 2Ls and 3Ls. I developed and taught Electronic Legal Research, Legal Citation, How to Use Citators, New York Legal Research.
